St. Johns Technical High School News

St. Johns Technical High students participated in a year of experiences during the 2012-2013 school year to better prepare them for the workforce. Students started the year interning (volunteering) at Southern Horticulture. They were able to spend every Wednesday morning for 12 weeks learning how to work at a plant nursery. Their duties included weeding, watering, organization, general care and upkeep for the very busy property. Following the plant nursery, the next venture was at Publix. Publix allowed students to utilize their current training videos in helping them better understand what it looks like and feels like to work at a grocery store. They practiced bagging groceries, managing the register, and also learned where items were located throughout the store.

Many employers look for community-experience for new hires. With this in mind, students ended their last 9 weeks volunteering at the St. Francis House. This was a great time to not only give back, but to learn organizational skills such as stocking both food and clothes for the homeless of St. Johns County.

Students also had the opportunity to job shadow. The goal of the class was to expose students to a wide variety of potential jobs while learning from local business owners what it takes to be successful in the workforce. Other job sites visited were: Chick-Fil-A, The Fountain of Youth, Atlantic Automotive, Flagler Hospital, Longhorn Steakhouse, and Barnes Farms.

The year was a true success. Students were able to go into the local community and connect with real people that hire for real jobs. The highlight of the St. Johns Technical High School CBVI program enabled one student to be hired part-time at Publix. Great Job!

Ketterlinus Elementary School News

At Ketterlinus Elementary School, our ESE students have the opportunity to participate in a wide-range of settings. Our gifted students are served in gifted-blended classes with teachers skilled in meeting their special needs. Our students with disabilities are included in general education classrooms and our ESE teachers provide the special instruction they need either in the regular classroom or in small groups based on their individual needs. We are especially proud of our behavior unit. Students in this program are often extremely intelligent yet need self-monitoring skills to help them in control their emotions. These students follow a very comprehensive leveled point system that increases their self-regulation and responsibility. As students progress from the most restrictive to the least restrictive levels, they gain a sense of self-confidence to manage more responsibilities and expectations. It is a delight to see students become more self-confident and effectively manage peer and authority interactions. As students become more independent, they increase their presence throughout our school to include enrollment in regular classrooms.

Central Florida Parent Center is a nonprofit organization that provides assistance to parents of children with disabilities or special education needs. Our Center receives funding from the U.S. Department of Education, Office of Special Education Programs for its AWARE project, a Parent Training and Information Center (PTI).

The AWARE project serves 30 counties in central and northeast Florida. AWARE's purpose is to ensure that parents of children with disabilities and young adults with disabilities will receive training and information on their rights, responsibilities, and protections under IDEA in order to develop the skills necessary to cooperatively and effectively participate in planning and decision-making relating to early intervention, educational, and transitional services.

The Aware Project provides interactive presentations, one-on-one assistance and support, opportunities for peer-to-peer support, information and resources, and a user friendly website, www.CFLparents.org.

Disability History and Awareness Weeks

The first two weeks of October are Disability History and Awareness Weeks! Section 1003.4205, Florida Statutes, entitled Disability History and Awareness Instruction, was signed into law in 2008. It requires school districts to designate the first two weeks of October as Disability History and Awareness Weeks and also promotes providing instruction for students in all public schools to expand student knowledge, understanding, and awareness of individuals with disabilities, disability history and the disability rights movement.

Florida started the first special education class in 1926 in Jacksonville. Since 1926, specially designed instruction and related services have expanded throughout Florida. Now, approximately 352,000 students identified with disabilities are participating in Florida's public education system and are graduating and going on to postsecondary education or employment. St. Johns County School District serves approximately 4, 400 students with disabilities.

We are proud to participate in promoting awareness of disability history and the contributions of individuals with disabilities and to designate the first two weeks in October of every year as Disability History and Awareness. We invite you to attend our October 8 Board meeting to view artwork created by our students with disabilities.

David Beckham (1975-)—David suffers from OCD and it manifests itself through constant cleanliness and perfection of all that is around him. Anything out of order is enough to cause a conflict and must be attended to immediately.

Examples of this complete order is that everything must be in pairs, if there are three books on a table one must be added, or one must be removed. Only 2% of the population suffer from this strong OCD.

FACT SHEET

Florida Voluntary Prekindergarten Specialized Instructional Services Educational Program

Overview

Florida's Voluntary Pre-Kindergarten Specialized Instructional Services (VPK SIS) educational program is a new option for parents of four-year-old children with disabilities that is available outside the traditional VPK classroom setting. If your child has a current Individual Education Plan (IEP) from your local school district that calls for specialized instructional services, you can choose VPK SIS instead of traditional VPK school-year or summer programs.

Program

VPK specialized instructional services are offered in individual or small group settings with a certified or licensed professional trained to provide specific instruction. Students enrolled in VPK SIS may use services identified on their IEP:

- Applied behavior analysis.
- Speech language pathology.
- Occupational therapy.
- Physical therapy.
- Listening and spoken language instruction.
- Other specialized instructional services consistent with the child's IEP.

Parents can choose one or more services and select from providers the Florida Department of Education (FDOE) has approved. Funding for each student is the same as for traditional VPK, but based on the rates these specialists charge for their services. So students in VPK SIS may receive fewer hours of service than students in traditional VPK.

Eligibility

If your children are eligible for VPK, you must first enroll them through the local early learning coalition office. Your child must meet three basic eligibility requirements for VPK SIS:

- Your child must live in Florida.
- Your child will be four years old on or before September 1 of the current year.
- Your child must have a current IEP from your local school district.

Providers

The FDOE has approved the following professionals to be VPK SIS providers:

- Individuals certified or licensed for applied behavior analysis services.
- Licensed speech-language pathologists.
- Licensed occupational therapists.
- Licensed physical therapists.
- Licensed clinical social workers.
- Licensed psychologists.
- Other licensed professionals who have applied to and been approved by FDOE.

The local early learning coalition pays VPK SIS providers directly for services delivered to children in the program based on the schedule of services form. Parents and providers work together to complete required forms.

Successful transition from school to community life is an ongoing process of planning for the future. This easy to understand workshop will de-mystify the Transition process for fathers, enabling them to become active participants in their child's educational planning.

Transition for DADS
August 30th
7:00 pm - 9:00 pm

Presented by: Wilbur Hawke

" I am the father of two sons (one with a disability) and was a stay at home dad after my youngest became sick at six months. I successfully navigated hospitals, pediatricians, the early intervention system, and the public school system. I was responsible for the IEP and participated in all the meetings until my son was old enough to make his own decisions. I have taught parents how to access the special education process based on this personal experience for the past twenty years. My goal during this workshop is to help you understand how to do non-emotional, clearly documented, collaborative business with a focus on outcomes. Not personal just business."

Tip of the Month:

Want to promote friendships between your child with a disability and his or her peers? Two keys to promoting friendships include ensuring close proximity to peers and creating frequent opportunities for the children to interact (Eason & Whitbread, 2006). See more tips below!

According to Eason and Kinney (2006), there are several ways parents and educators can promote friendships among children with disabilities and their peers. Here are some more tips:

- Enroll your child in typical community activities—this increases proximity to non-disabled peers.
- Encourage teachers to be strong role models for children by valuing all students' learning differences and treating all students with respect.
- Ask teachers to highlight your child's strengths and interests. Finding common interests and talents among students can increase the chance of friendships forming.
- Request teachers to regularly include the topic of disability awareness into the curriculum. Parents can provide lists of accomplishments of persons with disabilities to be shared.
- Ask teachers what students seem to be friendly toward your child, and invite these students to after-school activities with your child.
- If your child has difficulty using words to communicate, make sure your child has some type of assistive technology to help them communicate with their peers. It's also a good idea to train their non-disabled peers in the assistive technology as well.
- Sometimes adults can be barriers to friendships. If a teaching assistant is with your child most or all of the school day, encourage the assistant to facilitate your child's friendship with peers, rather than focusing on a friendship between the assistant and your child.
- Social interactions can be particularly difficult if your child has difficulty demonstrating social skills. Ask your child's educational team what social skills they see your child is missing, and ask when and how those specific social skills can be taught (e.g., smiling, complimenting, turn-taking).
- Ensure your house has fun toys to attract kids over for fun-filled play dates. It's okay to ask other children about preferences in toys.
- Keep your child's fashion appropriate. Although it's not fair to judge someone by the way they look, some kids may think that someone who 'looks cool' is cool.

Understanding Healthy Boundaries Across The Lifespan

ATTENTION PARENTS, GUARDIANS AND PROFESSIONALS

WHAT: Understanding Healthy Boundaries is a one-day seminar focused on creating and maintaining the physical, mental, and emotional well being of your individual with Down syndrome. Boundaries establish a system of what is acceptable and what is not acceptable in our lives and in the lives of those around us. Rather than merely separate, boundaries PROTECT what we possess and value, including our own life and body. By design, boundaries set the course for mutual respect, consideration, protection and safety in all forms of relationships.
